Commentary on The Gospel from John 10: 11 – 18

The image of Christ as our Good Shepherd has always appealed to human nature. One of the earliest paintings of Christ in the Roman catacombs represents Him as carrying an injured sheep on His shoulders. This is a manifestation of love which touches our innermost feelings. We do not mind being likened to sheep in this context. There is something guileless about a sheep, and at the same time a lot of foolishness. Does not this describe the vast majority of men, even many of those who openly oppose Christ? Is there not something very sheeplike about the man who, because God gave him a limited intellect, thinks he know all things and needs no further help from God? The sheep who thinks it know as much, and even more, that the Shepherd and sets out to fend for itself, is no more foolish than the man who thins he can do without God's revelation and God's Church.

Indeed, we all act like sheep on many occasions, when it comes to the things that concern our spiritual welfare. We often ramble off from the flock to nibble at little bits of forbidden pasture. However, we have a Shepherd who understands us, one whose patience and love are infinite. He is always ready to go after us when we stray too far; His voice is constantly reaching out to us missions, retreats, sicknesses, crosses and other various ways. How many times have we already felt His loving grace calling and helping us back to the safety of His fold?

There are many who are not so fortunate s we, who either through no fault of their own or through their own fault do not hear His voice and so not know or follow Him. This is an opportunity He gives us to show how we appreciate all He has done for us. He died on the cross for all men. He wills all men to profit by His death, and His statement "them also I must bring" is a direct appeal to us to co-operate with Him in this work. Every Christian is a missionary. The very fact of living the Christian life in its entirety, in the midst of our fellowmen, is of itself a powerful example to outsiders. It influences for good the lax Christian and the non-Christian. It makes them stop and think and look into their consciences. This is generally the first step on the road back to God.

The devout Christian will not stop at good example only. If he truly loves God, he must truly love his neighbor and must want him to have a share in his own good fortune. He knows there is welcome and room in heaven for all men, and he knows that the greater the number there the greater will be God's eternal glory. He will strive then by every available means to help his neighbor into Christ's fold.

After good example, prayer will be his most potent weapon. Day in, day out the devout Christian must pray for the conversion of his fellowmen who are wandering aimlessly in the barren desert of this life far from God. He must also learn all he can bout the truths of his faith in order to be able to help honest enquirers. He must also co-operate with any parochial or diocesan societies for the propagation of the faith, insofar as his family and financial state allow him.

The sermon preached by our Savior nearly two thousand years ago is still echoing and re-echoing around the world, calling on His faithful flock to do all in their power to help those other children of God who are still outside the fold. Do not shut your ears to this call of Christ today. Give Him a helping hand by helping your fellowman to see the light of the true faith.
